1. An automobile regiment, composed of four battalions, is assigned to each Military District. Three of the battalions are assigned to the three armies of the Military District, and the fourth is assigned to the headquarters of the Military District.
2. An automobile battalion has about 400 men and 260 trucks and cars. According to the table of equipment, the trucks are 3-ton Dodges, 3-ton MG's, and 3-ton Opel Blitzes. In 1948 the Yugoslav Army purchased 400 5-ton Bussing trucks in Germany.
3. In addition to the automobile battalion, each army has an office called Transport Management which has the following departments:
 - a. Transport Department, which assigns officers and men to units and allots vehicles to the automobile companies which are attached to each division;
 - b. Technical Department, which supplies new trucks and cars, and repairs old vehicles; and
 - c. Fuel Department, which provides fuel and oil for the vehicles.
4. Transport Management has a transport section in each of its divisions. The automobile companies attached to the divisions belong to, and are under the direct command of, the automobile battalions and regiments. An automobile company has approximately 90 vehicles and 100 men. Each company has its own repair shop employing about 24 workers.
